THE SOCIETY FOR PROPAGATING THE GOSPEL AMONG THE INDIANS AND OTHERS IN NORTH AMERICA, 1787-1953

On the 19th of November, 1787, twenty-one clergymen and laymen¹, "with such others as they [should] elect," were incorporated by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts as "THE SOCIETY FOR PROPAGATING THE GOSPEL AMONG THE INDIANS AND OTHERS IN NORTH AMERICA." Under powers described in the Act, the Society, limited to fifty members, who were to "have perpetual succession," was organized, and its missionary work was begun.

While it thus had an honorable place among the early undertakings in the newly created nation, it was, nevertheless, continuing operations long before established. For on the 27th of July, 1649, "the Commons of England assembled in Parliament" enacted that from thenceforth there should be a Corporation of sixteen persons in England, who should have "perpetual succession" and be called "The President and Society for propagation of the Gospel in New England." This Society, more familiarly known as "The New England Company of 1649," is probably the oldest Protestant missionary society in the world. Its purpose was to carry on "the preaching and propagating of the Gospel of Jesus Christ among the Natives, and also for maintaining of Schools and Nurseries of Learning, and for better education of the Children of the Natives." The work was carried on from 1649 to 1786 by the Reverend John Eliot, "the Apostle to the Indians," and succeeding missionaries under the direction of the New England

Commissioners of the Society.² By the year 1786, the officers and trustees of the New England Company, being English, had transferred their activities to Canada and the West Indies.

But long before this happened, in 1762, one hundred and four of the leading clergymen, colonial officials, public-spirited citizens and merchants of Massachusetts, who had the welfare of the Indians very much at heart, organized a "Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge among the Indians of North America," which was duly chartered by the Massachusetts Legislature. All of the New England Commissioners of the old "New England Company of 1649" then living were named as incorporators. These were: The Honorable Andrew Oliver, Secretary and Lieutenant-Governor of Massachusetts; the Reverend Andrew Eliot, D.D.; the Reverend Thomas Foxcroft; the Reverend Jonathan Mayhew, D.D.; and the Honorable Thomas Hubbard, Treasurer of Harvard College. Secretary Oliver's name heads the long list, and he is known to have been very deeply interested in the promotion of the proposed society. King George III, however, disapproved of the society and the organization was therefore obliged to disband.

Twenty-five years later, at the conclusion of the Revolutionary struggle with Great Britain, — the New England Company for the Propagation of the Gospel among the Indians having abandoned its work in the United States, — seven members of the former, disallowed "Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge" joined with others, in 1787 as we have seen, to form the present "Society for Propagating the Gospel among the Indians and Others in North America." The seven members of the present Society, who had belonged to the disbanded organization of 1762, were Governor James Bowdoin, the Honorable Samuel Dexter, Lieutenant-Governor Moses Gill, the Honorable William Hyslop, the Honorable Jonathan Mason, Lieutenant-Governor William Phillips and Deacon Ebenezer Storer. Probably none of the other members of the disbanded society were then alive.

There was, however, another reason for the organization of such a Society at this time. For, when the "Society in Scotland for Promoting Christian Knowledge" [organized, 25 May 1709] learned that the New England Company was withdrawing its support of missionary work among the Indians of New England, the Scotch society, by means of a commission³ dated 1 March 1787, named a board of commissioners in Boston to act as agent "for the education of Indian youths or Missionaries to be employed among the Indians." The training was to be under the care of the Honorable John Wheelock, LL.D., then President of Dartmouth College.

But the remarkable thing about this document sent over from Scotland is that it named each of the twenty-one gentlemen [see note 1] who were the incorporators of the Society for Propagating the Gospel among the Indians and others in North America, together with four other persons, namely, Governor James Bowdoin⁴, John Barret, the Reverend Charles Chauncy, D.D., minister of the First Church in Boston, and the Reverend Robert Annan, minister of the Church of the Presbyterian Strangers in Long Lane (now the Arlington Street Church). It appears obvious that these twenty-one gentlemen, while being willing to act as agent for the Scotch society, also made up their minds that the time had come for them to form a New England society to carry on the work of Christianizing the Indians as it had been continuously and conscientiously performed here since the earliest days of the first settlement of New England.

The membership of the Society for Propagating the Gospel among the Indians and Others in North America is composed of the clergy and laity of the Congregational churches, both liberal and evangelical. For, like the "Massachusetts Convention of Congregational Ministers" and the "Massachusetts Congregational Charitable Society," this Society did not disband at the time of the doctrinal controversy of a century and a quarter ago. Thus, three hundred and four years later, the work for which the ancient and honorable New England Company had been founded by Act of Parliament — the "Propagating of the Gospel among the Indians in North America" — still goes on, and each year since 1787, the present society has met, appropriated funds, supported missionaries, kept careful records, elected officers, filled vacancies in its membership, and occasionally has printed reports, discourses and sermons (sixty-one in number) throughout the one hundred and sixty-six years of its long and distinguished career.

³ The original commission of 1 March 1787 is among the papers of the Soc. for Prop. the Gospel among the Indians and Others in N. America.

⁴ Gov. Bowdoin was the first person to be elected to membership, 1788.

An excellent history of the society, by James Frothingham Hunnewell, was published in 1887, on the occasion of its one hundredth birthday, and in 1937, Dr. Samuel Atkins Eliot delivered the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary address, which the society re-printed in 1942. In 1948, the present writer prepared a paper on the "New England Company of 1649 and Its Missionary Activities", which is soon to be published in the Publications of The Colonial Society of Massachusetts. The earlier publications of The Society for Propagating the Gospel Among the Indians in North America (1787) are beginning to be almost as rare as the books, tracts and pamphlets in the English and Indian languages printed by the New England Company of 1649.

During the first century of its existence, the Society employed 166 missionaries in more than eighty outposts which reached from Maine to the state of Washington and along the southern Canadian border. As early as 1790, this work was being carried on at Stockbridge, New York, and at Martha's Vineyard and Mashpee in Massachusetts. At various times its missionaries have ministered to Indians of every tribe in the United States. In more recent years, they have worked with the Indians on the various government and private reservations from coast to coast, assisting especially in matters of counsel, health and welfare, as well as with the Indian churches and schools throughout the nation. During the last half century our missionaries (Dr. Kenngott, 1910-1911; Rev. Arthur P. Wedge, 1911-1927; and Dr. G. Elmer E. Lindquist, 1927-1953) have traveled each year many thousands of miles through the states west of the Mississippi and elsewhere continuing the excellent work of their predecessors. In the course of his long service, Dr. Lindquist has visited every tribe in the United States and many in Canada.

The following list of members has been compiled to preserve a record of all members elected since 1787. The Society is fortunate in the possession of full records of every meeting from 1787 to the present time. Five large leather-bound books contain the Secretaries' and Select Committees' records, 1787-1904, and two modern books continue these records to the present day. There are also two chests which contain the letters and papers of the Society. With the exception of the current Secretary's and Treasurer's records, all the valuable papers and books belonging to the Society should be kept together in a safe place. At the semi-annual meeting, 3 November 1904, it is recorded that "Mr. Chaney, for the Committee on the papers of the Society, made a report recommending that the valuable papers be left in the care of the Massachusetts Historical Society. The report was accepted." But nothing seems to have been done about it.

It is interesting to note that of the 405 members since 1787, more than 85 per cent [344] hold college degrees; more than half [215] hold doctor's degrees; and more than seventy per cent [286] are Harvard alumni. The laymen number 224, while 181 are clergymen. Seven have been Governors of Massachusetts⁵ and six have been Lieutenant-Governors⁶. Six have been Presidents of Harvard College⁷ and several have been Presidents of other colleges. Eight have been Chief-Justices of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts⁸ and thirteen have been Justices of this court. Many have served in the state legislature and in the United States Senate and House of Representatives. At least a dozen have held high military commissions. Eighteen have been Chaplains of the Massachusetts Senate and twenty-one have served as Chaplains of the House.

In relation to kindred societies, one third of our number [133] have been members of the Massachusetts Historical Society (1791) and 130 have been members of the Society for the Promotion of Theological Education in Harvard University (1816). Nearly half of all our members, [194] have been officers or members of the Bunker Hill Monument Association (1823). Eighty-two, nearly a quarter of our number, have been members of the American Antiquarian Society (1812) and sixty-three have been Trustees of the Evangelical Missionary Society in Massachusetts (1807), while sixty-one have been members of the Colonial Society of Massachusetts (1892) which was not founded until our society was 105 years old.
